

Green Travel

Traveling green was a great choice. At first, I was a bit afraid of the long train ride from Vienna to Pescara, and I was considering flying to Rome, then taking a bus from there. In the end, I chose to take the train, and I'm glad I did! Coming from Hungary, I'm not really used to the sight of those ginormous, dramatic mountains on the Austrian-Italian border. I knew I was going to be amazed, but I didn't expect this! I think the pictures speak for themselves.

After being amazed by the natural beauty of Austria, I had the chance to spend a few hours in beautiful Venice during my layover. I have never been there before, and even though I've heard all kinds of stories about the vibe of this legendary city, it still was a mind-blowing experience! After exploring the canals, I still had some time to enjoy an Aperol Spritz.

This whole experience turned out to be a lot more pleasant than a regular short plane ride! If anybody wants to explore Europe, this is what I would suggest. There's so much beauty along the way! This is a way more sustainable, eco-friendly solution to get to know the continent we live on!

Thank you for the opportunity!
